Quick Snapshot

- Tier-1 IT firms;' revenue remained muted, with average q-o-q CC growth of (-0.5%); TCS (1.2%) and TechM (0.6%) led, while Infosys (-1.3%) and HCL Tech (-3.3%) lagged.
- Margins were a mixed bag, with a negative bias;; TCS and TechM showed resilience, while HCL Tech and Wipro saw pressure, with Tier-1 average margins declining to ~18.8%.
- Deal momentum remained a key positive, with strong TCV trends across Tier 1 (TCS, Infosys, TechM) and mid-tier firms, supporting medium-term visibility, though conversion into revenues remains delayed due to elongated decision cycles and delayed execution.
- At multi-year low valuations amid AI fears, resilient Tier-1 leaders (TCS, Infosys, TechM) and select Tier-2 names (Coforge & PSYS) offer attractive risk-reward; we remain overweight and favour gradual position-building as proof of AI-driven spend emerges.

Revenues: Q4FY26 remained subdued for Tier 1 IT, with average q-o-q CC revenue growth at (-0.5%), sharply moderating from 1.7% in Q3. Within the cohort, TCS led with a 1.2% q-o-q CC growth, followed by Tech Mahindra (0.6%), while Infosys declined 1.3% q-o-q CC and HCL Tech was the weakest at (-3.3%), hit by deal deferrals, weakness in the telecom vertical and completion of large programs. Wipro's 0.2% growth was largely inorganic, masking underlying organic decline. On a y-o-y CC basis, Infosys led with 4.1% growth, while TCS and Wipro remained marginally negative, underscoring a still weak discretionary environment and early signs of AI-led productivity pass-throughs impacting revenues.

Among verticals, BFSI and Energy/Utilities remained relatively resilient, supported by cost optimization and transformation-led demand, while telecom and Hi-Tech continued to lag, reflecting discretionary cuts, client-specific issues, and slower decision-making cycles. In contrast, mid-tier IT companies continued to outperform, with Persistent (+3.4%), Coforge (+2.0%), and LTM (+1.2%) q-o-q CC growth, driven by sharper execution, stronger deal momentum, and higher exposure to digital engineering, cloud, and AI-led transformation programs. Structurally, mid-tier players appear better insulated from GenAI-linked cannibalisation risks due to lower dependence on legacy services and greater agility in embedding AI into delivery and GTM, supporting sustained outperformance versus Tier 1 peers going into FY27E.

Margins: Margin performance across Tier 1 IT firms remain mixed despite a supportive rupee depreciation backdrop, with offsets from wage hikes, restructuring costs, software seasonality, and elevated reinvestment toward AI-led go-to-market, capability expansion, and workforce upskilling. Aggregate large-cap EBIT margins softened to 18.8% (-35bps q-o-q / -56 bps y-o-y), reflecting these crosscurrents. TCS delivered strong margin performance in 8 quarters at 25.3%, aided by pricing improvement. Infosys margin at 21% (+4bps q-o-q). HCL Tech margins moderated to ~16.5% EBIT (down 202bps q-o-q) in Q4, impacted by software seasonality and wage hikes. TechM continues to standout driven by its cost-led transformation. Coforge saw margin expansion by 231bps q-o-q to 16.6%, driven by lower SG&A, forex, reduction in third-party cost, and lower marketing spend. PSYS margin dipped 47bps q-o-q to 16.3%, as gains from 3Q one-off reversals. Birlasoft's margin up 37bps q-o-q. Companies continue to channel productivity gains and rupee depreciation are reinvested into AI capability building, talent upskilling, and new offerings, limiting scope for meaningful margin expansion.

Deal win momentum: Deal activity remained muted in a seasonally soft quarter, with Tier-1 aggregate TCV declining 4.1% y-o-y (+0.6% q-o-q). Performance was mixed with TCS (+29% q-o-q) benefitted from mega deals and Wipro saw modest growth (+3.6% q-o-q), while Infosys (-33.3%), HCLTech (-35.6%), and TechM (-2.1%) reported sequential declines. Despite near-term volatility, underlying demand for large transformation programs remains intact, with continued pipeline conversion albeit at a slower pace due to elongated decision cycles and execution delays. Tier-2 companies outperformed, with Coforge reporting 16.4% y-o-y (down 2.0% q-o-q) growth in executable order book, excluding the framework agreements signed and LTTS delivering strong large-deal momentum (up 40% y-o-y). PSYS declined 10.9% q-o-q, due to weak seasonality witnessed in the last quarter. Overall, while revenue conversion remains uneven, sustained deal momentum and healthy TCV trends limit downside risk and position consistent deal winners for relatively stronger growth visibility into FY27E.

Guidance: Guidance across Tier 1 IT remained cautious and below expectations, reflecting a continuation of soft discretionary demand, client-specific ramp-downs, and AI led productivity pass-throughs. Infosys (1.5–3.5% CC) and HCL Tech (1–4% CC) both signal muted near-term growth with limited visibility on acceleration, while Wipro's -2% to 0% near-term guidance underscores persistent execution headwinds despite deal wins. Coforge has guided for EBITDA margin at 20.5-21%. PSYS reaffirmed its confidence in sustaining growth momentum, reiterating an aspirational revenue target of $2 billion and an EBIT margin range of 16–17% by FY27. Overall, commentary across companies indicates that while client budgets are intact, growth remains constrained by ongoing pressure on discretionary spends, delayed deal ramp-ups, and client-specific issues. Overall, the guidance implies a stable demand environment but lacking velocity, with recovery expected to be gradual and back-end loaded, contingent on improvement in macro conditions and faster deal-to-revenue conversion.

Valuation: The Nifty IT sector has seen a sharp valuation correction amid AI-led disruption concerns, with the market increasingly factoring in a deflationary impact on traditional services. However, underlying demand remains stable, with strong deal momentum and continued client focus on transformation, even as revenue conversion is delayed due to elongated decision cycles. While near-term rallies driven by INR depreciation may offer tactical upside, the structural debate remains centred on whether IT services can navigate AI-led deflation and successfully monetize the shift toward outcome-based, AI-driven delivery models. In this context, execution not demand is the key differentiator, keeping the medium-term outlook constructive but contingent on proof of AI-led revenue scaling.
